OVERNIGHT CARE OF IN-PATIENTS

Your pet may need to stay with us overnight for a number of reasons, including:

- Intensive care
- Post-operative recovery
- Whelping and kitting
- Stabilisation procedures, e.g. for diabetics

The responsibility for each animal lies with the veterinary surgeon for each case working alongside the vet who is on call. The on-call vet (always an employee of Blenheim Veterinary Centre) will be the vet that checks the animal during the night.

If your animal needs to stay overnight with us here at Blenheim Veterinary Centre, they will be checked regularly throughout the night.

The number and timing of checks made on a patient throughout the night is dependent on the condition of that patient. For example, if the patient is receiving IV fluids, checks will be more frequently done. The number of checks is at the discretion of the veterinary surgeon in charge of that particular case.

All in-patients will have hospital charts kept throughout their stay recording their progress.

All animals will be kept in our cat or dog ward, supplied with Vetbed bedding and kennel liners and fed a suitable diet (if appropriate) as directed by the vet.

Every effort will be made to make their stay as clean and comfortable as possible.
